What happens when a train comes and leaves?

Answer: A railway platform is a place where a train stops for taking and leaving passengers. Passengers get on and get down from the trains at a railway station. It is the busiest place. When the time for coming of a train is near, the passengers rush towards the platform and anxiously look for the train again and again. In a big railway station, there is a big shed on the platform. Temporary book stalls and tea stalls are found on a railway platform. The porters are found carrying luggage and hawkers are found selling things. The waiting rooms, the booking office, and the ticket counter are adjacent to the railway platform. A railway platform becomes very busy when a train arrives but becomes quiet when it leaves.
