

Paragraph on My First Day at College

Question: Answer the following questions to form a continuous paragraph. (100 words)

- Do you remember the first day of your college life?
- How did you feel when you first entered the college campus?
- How many classes did you attend on the day?
- What impression did you have about your teachers?
- How did you pass your Tiffin break?
- What things did you like best about the college?

Answer: There are some important days in everybody's life. The first day of my college life is such an important and memorable day that I always remember with joy. Before going to the college, I was a bit afraid of whether the students and teachers of the college would be friendly. Though there were six scheduled classes, only three classes were held. I attended all three classes. I was very much impressed at the excellent delivery and presentations of the teachers. The teachers were so good that whatever they taught us in the class, I still can remember them quite So I developed a special honor for them in the core of my heart. I passed my tiffin period with some of my classmates in the college canteen. The atmosphere of the college was very nice. Everybody was helpful and cooperative. I liked the friendly behavior of the students and teachers very much. The things that I liked best about the college included my feeling of liberty, the participatory teaching method adopted by teachers, etc.

Or,

My First Day at College

Question: "My first day at college was thrilling. I shall never forget the day". You complete the following composition about your first day at college. Highlight the events or moments that you enjoyed most (around 100 words).

Answer: From my school days I heard a lot about college life from my college-going elder brother. So. I was eagerly waiting for that happy and romantic college life. At last, the cherished day came. It was the 26th of October 2010. I was charmed to see the attractive college building. I understood that college life opened before me a new vision of life and I must go forward. The whole college campus was crowded with lots of young pupils both male and female. They were all unknown to me. I felt very lonely. I was moving here and there. At last, I met one of my school friends. I was relieved. We exchanged greetings. We went to the notice board of the college and wrote down the class routine. I found that the classes were not held in a particular room. When the bell for the first period rang, we entered the room number. After a while, a well-dressed, handsome gentleman entered the class, He was a professor of English. He spoke to us very softly in simple and clear English. His speech was meaningful. I listened to him with undivided attention. Classes on Bengali and other subjects were held. All the teachers were highly qualified. During the oil period, I went to the college common room. I was glad to see the college common room. The College Assembly Hall was very attractive. Another attraction for me on my first day at college was the college library. I found thousands of books arranged on shelves and almirahs. My college life opened before me a world of responsibilities. It was a day of discovery of my self indeed.

Or,

My First Day at College

Question: Write a paragraph about 'Your First Day at College' by answering the questions below.

Do you remember the first day of your college life?

How did you feel when you first entered the college campus?

How many classes did you attend on the day?

What impression did you have about your teachers?

How did you pass your tiffin break?

What things did you like best about the college?

Answer: I can still remember the first day of my college life. It was such an important and memorable day that I always remember it with joy. Before going to college, I was a bit afraid of whether the students and teachers of the college would be friendly or not. Though there were six scheduled classes, only three classes were held. I attended all three classes. All of them were interesting. I was very much impressed at the excellent delivery and presentations of the teachers. The teachers were so good that whatever they taught us in the class, I still can remember them quite well. At first, I felt lonely. But soon I met with some of my new classmates. I passed my tiffin period with them in the college canteen. The atmosphere of the college impressed me very much. Everybody was helpful and cooperative. I liked the friendly behavior of the students and teachers. The things that I liked best about the college were liberty, the participatory teaching method adopted by teachers, the big playground, the small pond, and the botanical garden with plants and trees.