

Short Paragraph on The Postman

Question:

- Who is a postman?
- What does he wear and carry?
- How does he discharge his duties?
- What is his pecuniary condition?
- What is his position in society?

Answer: postman is a very familiar figure in our society. He is a low- paid government employee of the postal department. He puts on a khaki dress. He carries a leather bag across his shoulders. He moves from door to door and delivers letters, parcels, money orders and other postal articles. He is as regular as a clock. He performs his duties in all weather fair or foul. He is honest, dutiful and well-behaved. He is a friend of all and an enemy of none. He lives a very poor life. He can hardly make both ends meet with his small income. A village postman leads a more toilsome life than a town postman. Thus a postman is a very important person in our society. We can not think of civilized life without the services of a postman. We should give him due to honour and try to better his condition.

A Paragraph on The Postman

The postman is a very petty job. The postman is a familiar figure in our society. He renders essential service to a community. In fact, he is an important link between a locality and the outside world. He comes to the door in his daily rounds of duties and delivers letters, telegrams, parcels, money orders etc. to proper persons. He holds a responsible job an interview letter or an appointment letter of a person may be cancelled for late delivery. He brings happy news to someone and sad news to some other. Thus, he carries mixed feelings of joy and tears. He is still ill-paid a pity though he has a great responsibility to work.
