A Village Fair Held at Sreemoddi Kalibari

Answer: A grand village fair was held last Friday at Sreemoddi Kalibari premises under a large banyan tree on the bank of the mighty river Jamuna. It was held on the occasion of the Pahela Baishakh, the Bengali New Year's Day. This fair is held every year on the Pahela Baishakh. Therefore it is also called a Baishakhi Mela. It is very great faith in Homna Upazila. The fair held on last Friday broke the past records. Hundreds and thousands of villagers from far and wide attended the fair that continued from morning till evening. The main attractions of the fair included Nagor Dola, Magic Show, Jarigan, Kabigan, Baulgan and sale of local handicrafts. People of different professions were found to bring their own handmade articles for sale. The shopkeepers sitting in rows displayed their articles in an attractive atmosphere. Clothes, toys, cheap ornaments, cosmetics, fancy goods, utensils, bamboo-made articles, and many other attractive things were placed there. UNO, Homna with other govt. officials visited the fair and talked to the visitors. She also stressed the need for such a fair that focuses on our Bengali culture and heritage.

Sufficient police personnel was engaged in ensuring security and maintaining law and order. So, no unexpected incident occurred on the occasion.

A Bridge of Souls

Answer: A village fair is in true sense a bridge of souls. The fair that has sat under the banyan tree of the village Gabloli is throbbing with life. Every year in the last week of December this fair sit by the Karatoa is enriched with tradition and age-old heritage. People from nearby villages come to visit this village with a view of buying and selling goods. It seems the Whole area turns into a shrine where people of all religions and caste come and exchange their greetings wholeheartedly. Different cultural functions are arranged here. Kamaluddin, a native, has said that this fair is being held from the British regime till today. It is contributing to the development of brotherhood and amity among the people of this area. But a local has said that this fair is also destroying the moral character of the youth. Gambling and vulgar show are arranged here almost every day. Young people are being addicted to them. Hence, Farid Uddin, the UP Chairman has said that he is going to take some measures against this evil practice.
